Journalist: Obi Onyebuchi plays for the capital city Doves Football Club in Abuja. Obi is excited that the National team, the super Falcons, are currently in Canada playing at the Fifa women's world cup. But she and her teammate face many challenges developing their own careers. They say women football does not get enough support from Nigeria's football federation, the NFF (...)

Adana Gloria Nuaneri played for the national team at the world cup twice in the 1990s, and has coached the under 17s national squad.

The biggest challenge facing the development of women's football is the lack of sponsorship. Many potential sponsors don't see the sport as profitable. So they don't invest.
